VACATION.

The children all feel good. Their teachers, too, are quite prepared. To quit their work for play. For two months now they'll cease to lead. A life prescribed by rule. And rest, and room, and recreation. Without a thought of school.

Delightful may their outings be. Refreshing be their rest. May all the pleasures they enjoy. Give life an added zest. And when vacation time is past, And autumn days grow cool. May every one of them be glad. At getting back to school.
